Why is Daily Prayer Important?

At an early age, I was taught that in everything that you do, seek the Lord for His guidance, wisdom and protection.

There are times where I would try to find the solution on my own and only come to realize that I made matters worst by having a "superwoman" mentality. You know the belief that "if you want something done right, do it yourself" kind of attitude.

But, it never failed that when I actively sought the time to go before the Lord on my behalf and for others, a peace would find me, doors were opened or even closed to allow me to step into the right opportunity. When I take time to pray about things during the good and bad times, life seems to get better. And, then the relationship between God and me got stronger. He seemed more of a true relative than an big idea.

When I need peace, in an area of my life, a marketing solution, or simply thinking about a friend or family member, I can make my request known by filling in the following and letting my faith guide me. And, you know what really gets me excited? When I go back to read my prayers and see the progress that has been made. The proof is not in the pudding but in the prayer.

I created this simple prayer prompt worksheet for you to use as you strive on your journey to becoming fearless and focused in your personal and professional life. Print a few sheets and keep them close on your nightstand or your desk. Make them prompts a part of your daily success routine.
